For cities and towns, complying with today's environmental regulations is a complex challenge. Budgets are tight and mistakes can prove costly. By meeting the regulators, and learning first-hand how they enforce the rules, municipal officials can gain insights that will help them avoid troubles down the road. This free workshop will get you better acquainted with the people behind the regulations and help you confront emerging issues.

AGENDA

This free workshop is intended for two municipal audiences: chief elected officials and senior staffers, and public works and water/sewer professionals. Each breakout period will provide either general information or a networking opportunity for the first audience, and a pair of technical sessions for the second.
